20. Space Brain

Screenplay: CHRISTOPHER PENFOLD
Director: CHARLES CRICHTON

Alien hieroglyphics suddenly appear on all of Alpha's communication screens. The source is a fantastic display of light in space. The first Eagle sent out is assumed destroyed when a meteorite screams out and impacts the lunar surface. Koenig is horrified to learn that the six-foot diameter mass is the compressed form of the Eagle and its pilots! Alan Carter and co-pilot Kelly are also out in space searching for the missing Eagle at the time of the horrifying discovery. Kelly leaves the Eagle to get first-hand data on the mysterious lights, but after his exploratory spacewalk, Kelly appears to have gone berserk. It is soon learned that the light source is a brain that wants to warn Alpha that it is on a collision course with its Moon, both masses unable to avoid impact. However, before it was realized that the brain meant no harm, a nuclear explosive filled Eagle was launched into the brain. Koenig orders the ship back, but the remote control system shorted out and the craft is now on a collision course with Alpha. Koenig must board the Eagle and disarm the bombs before it's too late.
